PREFACE

The aim of this bibliography is to present a complete record of the editions of Thomas Gray's works, together with a list of all the reviews, critical notices, and studies relating to him that have thus far appeared. I have made it as full as possible in order to indicate the extent of Gray's popularity and influence. Notwithstanding great diligence and pains, I have doubtless come far short of what I aim to do; for it is not to be expected that a bibliography compiled by any one person shall be complete. I can only hope that nothing of great importance has escaped me.

In the case of critical notices, one exception to the statement above must be made. I have not attempted to include all histories of English literature, the number of which is so great that the mention of even a considerable part would swell the list to an utterly unwieldy size, but have included only the most important of them.

I have marked the more important criticisms with an asterisk.

In designating libraries, the following abbreviations are employed:

- ALE, the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh.
- B, the Bodleian Library, Oxford.
- BKB, die Königliche Bibliothek zu Berlin.
- BM, the British Museum.
- BN, la Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris.
- BNF, la Biblioteca Nazionale, Florence.
- BNR, la Biblioteca Nazionale, Rome.
- BPL, the Boston Public Library.
- NRB, la Bibliothèque Royale de Belgique, Brussels.
- CU, the Cornell University Library, Ithaca, N. Y.
- CAU, the Cambridge University Library.
- COLU, the Columbia University Library, New York.
- NKU, die Königlich Öffentliche Bibliothek zu Dresden.
- HH, the library of the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, Haigh Hall, Wigan, England.
- HU, the Harvard University Library, Cambridge, Mass.

- JRM, the John Rylands Library, Manchester, England.
LC, the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.
LP, the Liverpool Public Library.
NYP, the New York Public Library.
PC, Pembroke College Library, Cambridge, England.
TC, Trinity College Library, Cambridge, England.
UP, the Library of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa.
YU, the Yale University Library, New Haven, Conn.
ZSB, die Züricher Stadt-Bibliothek, Zürich, Switzerland.

I desire to record my gratitude for valuable help to my colleagues, Professors Joseph Q. Adams, Lane Cooper, and Benton S. Monroe; to Mr. George F. Barwick, of the British Museum; to Mr. Alfred Rogers, of the Cambridge University Library; to Mr. Ralph L. George, of the University of Lyons; to Mr. William C. Lane, of the Harvard University Library; to Mr. Andrew Keogh and Professor Robert L. Sanderson, of Yale University; and to the courteous officials of all the libraries in which it has been my pleasure to work, especially those of the New York Public Library, the British Museum, the Bodleian, the Cambridge University Library, and the Bibliothèque Nationale.

In the Contents is the following: "Elegy, written in a country church-yard, with a most beautiful Latin translation, p. 248." In the Notes, ii. 294, we read: "To this edition only is added a most elegant Latin translation of the Elegy, by an Irish Gentleman at Eton College; which, by the Learned, is deem'd a most ingenious and capital performance." But in reality the Latin translation does not appear at all in this edition; since there is no gap in the pagination it could not have appeared at the place indicated. For this note I am indebted to Mr. Andrew Keogh, the obliging Librarian of Yale University.

8vo, pp. 82, [1]. 2 fr. The bard is added. At the end the translator says: "Si le petit recueil que je publie mérite quelque attention, on pourra me reprocher d'y avoir omis l'ode pindarique intitulée Le Progrès de la Poésie: l'emploi de la fable, qui y domine, lequel n'est plus souffert dans un sujet moderne, m'a détourné de traduire ce morceau, si beau qu'il soit du reste. En outre, l'auteur n'y cite que les poètes de sa nation, et j'eusse été contrarié de me rendre l'interprète d'un patriotisme injuste." BN (Yk. 4071)

1807. MR. HOWE. In The Port Folio, Aug. 29, 1807, n. s. iv. 143. [392a]

Begins, Hail, genius of these shades severe. 5 stanzas. The translator was an American poet.

1810. ANNA SEWARD. Paraphrase of Gray's Alcaick ode, written in the album of the Grand Chartreuse, on his way back to England, after having visited the Italian cities with Mr. Walpole. In her Works, ed. Walter Scott, Edinburgh, John Ballantyne & Co., 1810, iii. 44-6. [393]

Begins, Hail, guardian of this deep severe retreat. 6 quatrains, rhyming abab.

"This attempt is boldly paraphrastic. It appeared to the translator that Gray must mean more than he has, at least, perspicuously expressed, when he says in this latin ode, that 'the sublime scenery round the Chartreuse inspires him with more religious reverence than the statues of Phidias, adorned with gold.' Strange, indeed, if it did not; since, though such objects may excite admiration of human skill, they have no obvious tendency to inspire devotion. Surely that was saying too little for those awful monuments of their Creator's power, which inevitably lift the serious and feeling heart to its God. The above English version ventures to make the poet say what he must have meant; that he there more powerfully feels the presence of the Deity, than amid the pomp of the Romish altars, adorned with pictures, and statues, steaming with incense, and blazing with gold. The translator also takes the liberty to add another, and more pious idea to that, with which Gray's latin ode somewhat abruptly concludes."

Not reprinted by Pattee; cf. his edition iii. 405.

Begins, Thou genius of this sacred place. 6 stanzas, rhyming aabb.

1825. SIR CHARLES ABRAHAM ELTON (?). Extracts from this trans. in Excerptions from an idler's scrap-book in The London Mag., March, 1825, n. s. i. 366-7. [395]

Reprinted in The Works of Charles Lamb, ed. E. V. Lucas, London, Methuen, 1903, i. 381-2, 544-5, vii. 979. The trans. was attributed by Mr. Dobell to Sir Charles A. Elton, and Mr. Lucas thinks this plausible. Begins, Dread somewhat! hallowing to thyself this spot. 5 stanzas.

1840. CLAUDE SCOTT, in his Oriental musings, and other poems, 1840 (?). [396]

Begins, Presiding Spirit! that here. This work is not listed in either the English or the American Catalogue, and is not in the BM.

1798. AUGUSTE JACQUES LEMIERRE D'ARGY (1798) was not, as is sometimes stated, a translator of the Elegy, but merely revised and republished the translation by D. B., substituting a prose translation of the Epitaph for D. B.'s verse; see nos. 81, 343, 748. [750

Torri, 1843, pp. 157-61, reprints a translation "par M. Le Mierre, in quadernari a rime variamente alternate," which he says (p. 203) appeared at "Parigi, 1788 (nella sua versione di tutte le Opere di Gray)." It begins, L'éther se décolore, et ses feux ont pâli. But Torri is in error. In Lemierre's volume the translation begins, La cloche du couvre-feu tinte le clas du jour qui expire (cf. no. 748) and is in prose. I cannot now determine whose version Torri reprints; from the date I suspect it may have been either that of Merlin de Douai (see no. 743) or that of F. N. (see no. 744); I have not seen either one of these. If the date is wrong, it may have been any one of nos. 740, 745, 753, 760a, 763, or some one which I have not recorded at all.

John Martin, in his edition of the Elegy, London, 1839, p. ix, erroneously ascribes this translation to Le Tourneur. The confusion is explained by the following title-page:

Les nuits d'Young, traduction de Le Tourneur, suivies de l'Élégie de Gray, sur un cimetière de campagne, traduite par le même, et en vers par M.-J. Chénier. Nouvelle édition, ornée de deux vignettes. Paris. H. Langlois Fils et Le Bailly, Éditeurs, Rue Dauphine 13. 1826.

Before 1771. ANONYMOUS. In a review of the anonymously edited Beiträge zur deutschen Lektüre für Leser und Leserinnen, Leipzig, bei Büscheln, [1773], in the Frankfurter Gelehrten Anzeigen (reprinted in the Jubiläums-Ausgabe of the Sämtliche Werke xxxvi. 40-41), Goethe writes as follows: "Den Herrn Verleger und übrige Freunde des Herrn Verfassers ersuchen wir, bloss die Übersetzung der Kirchhofselegie mit denen beiden prosaischen Übersetzungen, die man schon davon hatte, zu vergleichen. Und wozu eine neue prosaische, da wir die vortreffliche poetische von Gotter haben?" Uebel also refers to Adolf Laun, Die Dorfkirchhofselegie und ihr Dichter, Oldenburg, 1886, p. 8. From these references it appears that two prose translations had been made before Gotter's poetical translation appeared, and that a third was included in the work reviewed by Goethe. Neither Uebel nor I, however, have been able to locate these two translations preceding Gotter's. [771a, b]

THEODORE WHITEFIELD HUNT. "Thomas Gray's 'Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard,' Stoke Pogis, was completed in 1750 and published in 1751, and has become an English classic, nothing superior to it as an elegy preceding it, so that to quote from it is invidious. Its 'curfew,' 'solemn stillness,' 'ivy-mantled tower,' 'rugged elms,' 'incense-breathing morn,' 'boast of heraldry,' and scores of similar allusions are now a vital part of English poetic reference, and at once suggest their author and time. The marvel that so profound a classical scholar could have written so choice a specimen of impassioned lyric is diminished when it is recalled that Spenser and Milton were his models." 1909. ——— "Gray's Ode is not only a lyric poem of the first order: it is also a distilled and concentrated body of criticism by the most accomplished scholar and finest critic of his time. Every word in it is weighed and measured, and it only yields its full meaning to exact and minute study. When he speaks of the springs of Helicon as the source of poetry, he is not merely using a traditional metaphor; he also lays stress on the organic connection of the whole of Western poetry with Hellenic origins. The movement of poetry, as he says elsewhere, was from Greece to Italy, and from Italy to England." In his The springs of Helicon, New York, Longmans, 1909, 8vo, pp. ix, xi-xii. [1455]

I have been unable to find the complete text of this squib. Both the reviewer in The Gentleman's Mag. and J. Booth seem to have been in error as to who Fobus was. By Fobus Gray always meant the Duke of Newcastle. See the Letters, ed. Tovey, i. 288, ii. 7, 14, 17, 36, iii. 313. On the other hand Dr. Robert Smith, Master of Trinity, and author of the Treatise on optics, was sometimes called Old Focus.

THE MONTHLY REVIEW. Review of Gray's Poems, 1768. "All that we find new in this collection is, The Fatal Sisters, an ode, the Descent of Odin, an ode, and the Triumphs of Owen, a fragment. These turn chiefly on the dark diableries of the Gothic times; and if to be mysterious and to be sublime be the same thing, these deep-wrought performances must undoubtedly be deemed so. For our part, we shall for ever regret the departure of Mr. Gray's muse from that elegantly-moral simplicity she assumed in the Country Church-yard." May, 1768, xxxviii. 408. [1541]

1777. WILLIAM COWPER wrote to Joseph Hill, April 20, 1777: "I have been reading Gray's works, and think him the only poet since Shakespeare entitled to the character of sublime. Perhaps you will remember that I once had a different opinion of him. I was prejudiced. He did not belong to our Thursday society, and was an Eton man, which lowered him prodigiously in our esteem. I once thought Swift's letters the best that could be written; but I like Gray's better. His humour, or his wit, or whatever it is to be called, is never ill-natured or offensive, and yet I think equally poignant with the Dean's." On May 25 he wrote: "When I wrote last, I was in the middle of the book. His later Epistles, I think, are worth little, as such, but might be turned to excellent account by a young student of taste and judgment." Well was he skill'd in old Poetic Lore—

Not such alone as Greece or Latium sung—
He dar'd thro' Gothic Darkness to explore;
And strike the Lyre that Runic Bards had strung.

Heard ye that sound!—Alas! who has not heard!
The magic Voice still vibrates in my ear,

What time great Odin's sable Form appear'd,
And Hela's Confines trembled at his spear.

9. NOTE ON THE MANUSCRIPTS

I subjoin such notes as I have been able to gather respecting the whereabouts of MSS. of Gray's works. These notes make no pretence to completeness.

The Library of Pembroke College, Cambridge, possesses Gray's Commonplace books (cf. Bradshaw's introduction, 1891), including a MS. of the Elegy (cf. Gosse's ed. i. 225-32 and Bradshaw's note on the Elegy). For facsimiles, see nos. 18, 625, 655. [1994]

Another MS. of the Elegy is in the Library of Eton College. This was the Fraser MS.; see no. 662 and Bradshaw's note on the Elegy. Eton also has the original MS. of the Eton Ode; cf. The Illus. Lon. News, June 20, 1908, cxxxii. 896. [1995]

A third MS. of the Elegy is in Egerton 2400 in the British Museum. This formerly belonged to Thomas Wharton. See no. 1997. For a facsimile see no. 735b. [1996]

The British Museum also contains the following MSS. of interest to students of Gray: [1997]

Add. 5821, fol. 53, Impromptu, suggested by the ruins at Kingsgate.

Add. 5833, fol. 11-4, 20-2, 24, Memoranda.

Add. 5842, fol. 119, Will.

Add. 15,000, fol. 209, Two odes, printed. 4to.

Add. 19,918, Letter to the Rev. J. Brown, 1764.

Add. 24,503, fol. 95, and 24,614, fol. 8, Notes by John Hunter, 19th cent.

Add. 26,889, fol. 23, 25, 40, 46, 50, 52, 54, 81, Correspondence with W. T. Howe.

Add. 27,637, The bard set to music, by J. W. Callcott, 1786.

Add. 32,329, fol. 1, 2, Letters to T. Percy and Prof. L. Broeket, n. d. Fol. 3, Anecdote of Gray, c. 1750. Fragment.

Add. 32,561-2, Poems and extracts from Gray's MSS. The valuable collection made by Mitford.* The former includes, fol. 126-56, copies of Gray's letters to Asheton, 1740, 1742. Cf. Tovey, Gray and his friends, pp. vii-xi. Described in the Catalogue of Add. MSS., 1882-7, pp. 153-4. These MSS. were written between 1845 and 1856.

Add. 36,270, fol. 77-84, Elegy, c. 1749.

* The entire series of Mitford's commonplace books and recollections, 1845-56, fills 17 volumes, which are numbered Add. 32,559-75.

Add. 36,359, fol. 59, Drawing of Gray's monument at Stoke Pogis, 1828. Fol. 60b, Epitaph on his mother's tomb at Stoke, copied in 1828.

Add. 36,817, Notes on classical Greek literature, 1747. Fol., pp. iii, 19. Given in 1806 by Richard Stonhewer to Mathias. At the Mathias sale, 1837, bought by Samuel Rogers; descended to his grandniece, Emily Sharpe; given by her between 1900 and 1905 to the British Museum.

Add. 36,818, Transcript of La Cueva's Relazione di Venetia, 18th cent. In Gray's autograph. The MS. has the same history as 36,817, q. v.

Add. 37,683, fol. 77, A parody on the Elegy, made at Cambridge by William Taylor. See no. 912.

Egerton 2400, fol. 1-217, Letters to Wharton, March 12, 1740-May 24, 1771 (including El, fol. 45); fol. 218-227, Letters from James Brown to Wharton, July 24-Aug. 17, 1771; fol. 228-235, copies by Wharton of some of Gray's poems and rhymes, etc.; fol. 236-271, Letters from Mason to Wharton relating to Gray, Oct. 28, 1765-July 15, 1773; fol. 272, Letter from Mitford to Mrs. Wharton about his forthcoming ed. of Gray and reflecting on Mason's ed., Feb. 28, 1816.

Stowe 865, fol. 86, Latin version of the Elegy by W. H. Roberts, 18th century.

Gray's nine MS. volumes of music are in the possession of Henry E. Krehbiel, Esq., 152 West 105th Street, New York. See no. 1886. [1998]

A MS. owned in 1899 by the Misses Sharpe, grandnieces of Samuel Rogers, was described in The Athenæum, March 18, 1899, p. 338. This is now, apparently, B. M. Add. 36,817; see no. 1997. [1999]

The late Mr. John Morris, of 13, Park Street, Grosvenor Square, London, possessed a valuable collection of Graiana, which is described by Gosse in his ed. iv. 339-43. [2000]

Mr. John Murray also has some MSS. relating to Gray, including his Journal in the Lakes; cf. Tovey's ed. of the Letters iii. 232, n. 1. [2001]

"An early correspondence of Gray's which is said to throw light upon his difference with Walpole" was owned in 1912 by the Messrs. Quaritch, of London. [2002]

For the letters recently discovered by Mr. Toynbee, see no. 1248. [2003]

For the letters lately sold by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, see no. 1249. [2004

For some MSS. at Buffalo, N. Y., see Mrs. H. L. Elmendorf, Descriptive catalogue of the Gluck collection of MSS. and autographs in the Buffalo Public Library, Buffalo, N. Y., 1899, 8vo, pp. 47-8. [2004a

[The numbers refer to items. The name of a publisher is included only when the book in question is devoted entirely to Gray. The name of a periodical is included, in general, only when the name of the author of the article in question is not known. In Section 4 the individual poems are indexed only when mentioned in the title of the collection; to have made a complete list for this section would have swollen the index to inordinate size.]
